There is no doubt that having access to detailed information is always beneficial. This makes it more interesting to have multiple add-ons at hand that help you get the most of each browser. Here, you can find a collection of ten of such plugins, most of which you will surely come across in your everyday browsing. It is imperative to mention that the collection is open to the newest version of all major browsers, including Chrome, Firefox and Opera. You can launch most of the add-ons from the Omnibar, the add-ons itself are also available for Mozilla Firefox users. Smart print and save as PDF files With the Smart Print and PDF option, you are able to save any webpage as PDF file and print it by clicking Ctrl+P. Apart from this, you can create the whole page and save it using Ctrl+I. Notably, this feature requires a PDF plugin to be installed, which offers this unique ability to save as a PDF file. In case of your PDF plugin not supporting this, you can change the encoding type using Ctrl+K and find the option in the menu. Sites List helps you access your favorite ones in a click The 'Sites List' option shows the website categories, such as news, video, photos, and more. Once you click on a category, it will list all the websites that are dedicated to this topic, which you can browse through.

The navigation menu will automatically update and look the same in all major browsers, including Opera, Chrome and Firefox. For this add-on to work, it requires a plugin that is installed. Hulu for Hulu, ESPN for ESPN, and more If you're into websites that focus on sports, chances are that you will find the ESPN one handy. The plugin allows you to get the latest news about your favorite team. It includes clips from all ESPN shows, at top of the hour, and you can also start a live broadcast from ESPN's live coverage page. The Huffington Post for the latest news Have you ever been looking for the latest headlines? Then the HUFFPOST makes it very easy to get that information. This Chrome extension helps you set the right color temperature for your monitors. Monitor temperatures work differently from one another. For example, CRT monitors usually have a slightly bluish tint to them. In contrast, LCD monitors are usually much warmer in appearance. Screen Color Temperature adjusts this color balance to your personal taste. Read the documentation for usage and to configure settings. Well, it doesn't provide custom profiles or preset color modes, but it provides an easy to use (if not too extensive) Chrome extension for modifying your monitor's settings - in a very simple and straightforward fashion. Share This PostA Biopharmaceutical Approach to a Target-Specific Parenteral Drug Delivery System. In recent decades, protein drugs have emerged as promising therapeutic options for a variety of conditions, including cardiovascular diseases, cancer, metabolic disorders, and inflammatory diseases. These protein drugs are generally administered by the intramuscular, subcutaneous, or intravenous routes. However, their therapeutic efficacy can be limited due to instability and in vivo clearance. Targeted delivery and parenteral administration are considered attractive strategies to increase the bioavailability and subsequent therapeutic efficacy. This approach is promising for protein drugs but challenging because of the complexity and sequence similarity of their molecular structures. A major challenge is that many protein drugs are susceptible to denaturation during the formulation process. Moreover, these proteins are cytotoxic. Therefore, the development of a biopharmaceutical approach that can protect protein drugs while avoiding in vivo toxicity and maintaining their bioactivity is of major importance.

This review aims to describe potential strategies for parenteral delivery of target-specific protein drugs. A known seal member disclosed in Patent Document 1 is constructed so that a cylindrical seal part is accommodated in a cylindrical opening part formed in a middle collar part, and the cylindrical opening part and the cylindrical seal part are joined with a joining member. The joining part is disposed between a flange of the middle collar part and a flange of a base member of the axle cover. The joining part is comprised of a bearing flange formed on the base member, the middle collar part and the cylindrical opening part of the middle collar part of the axle housing, and the cylindrical seal part of the axle housing. The cylindrical seal part is accommodated in the cylindrical opening part when it is joined with the cylindrical opening part, and the outer periphery of the cylindrical seal part contacts the inner periphery of the b7e8fdf5c8
